Dear Forum,

Having spent quite some time figuring out how "best" to plant larger drifts of different daffodils, I am now seeing what I have "created" and "done" and begin to wonder whether some of my daffodils might look better planted in slightly different locations within the garden. When is the best time to do so? How should one best go about digging out daffodils in order to avoid damaging the bulbs. -- Most of my gardening tools are from Sneeboer in Holland.

Thanks.

I would also love to see some pictures of daffodil drifts in various landscaping schemes.

Best regards,

Niels
