

Help with 1Y-Y flower ID

Author : Sara Van Beck, Georgia

Categories : Daffodil Types, Standards

Date : February 10, 2010

Daffnet.org

For people interested in growing, showing, or hybridizing daffodils.

<https://daffnet.org>

All - I've run across this flower in a number of gardens now; I apologize the images aren't better for ID purposes... It is an early season bloomer, and a very large flower. As I've found it here and there in gardens of various socio-economic statuses, I figure it had to have been common back in the 1910s and 1920s. I've been calling it Maximus so it has a name I can easily recognize whilst going thru my flower shots, but I'm not wedded to that. Any thoughts much appreciated... =s