

N. hedraeanthus luteolentus - diff. forms

Author : Brian Duncan, Northern Ireland

Categories : Breeding, Bulb Information, Growing Daffodils, Hybridizing

Date : December 19, 2019

Attached are pics of several forms and colours of what I have been accustomed to calling N. hedraeanthus ssp. Luteolentus but now, according to Rafa I must learn to call it N. blancoi.

This is my favourite bulbocodium because of the lovely broad petalled form and the short mostly upright stem - in contrast to the almost horizontal stem of the true N. hedraeanthus.

I've been using both forms in my breeding programme but I can't claim any dramatic successes. I can't help wondering if the yellow forms are crosses of Yellow bulbocodiums x N.hedraeanthus,

It is easy to imagine the same form - but not easy to imagine Yellow N. blancoi coming from the white purity of N. cantabricus x the mostly whitish/pale lemon N. hedraeanthus.

N. hedraeanthus luteolentus - diff. forms.... N. hedraeanthus luteolentus - full face. N. hedraeanthus luteolentus - yellow form (2) N. hedraeanthus luteolentus - yellow form N. hedraeanthus luteolentus (2) N. hedraeanthus luteolentus (3)

N.-hedraeanthus-luteolentus-diff.-forms.....jpg

N.-hedraeanthus-luteolentus-full-face..jpg

N.-hedraeanthus-luteolentus-yellow-form-2.jpg

N.-hedraeanthus-luteolentus-yellow-form.jpg

N.-hedraeanthus-luteolentus-2.jpg

N.-hedraeanthus-luteolentus-3.jpg